Preventing or Responding to Distress Among Persons Living with Dementia Through the Promotion of Well-Being on: September 30, 2020

Presenter: Dr. Jennifer Carson, PH.D., Research Assistant Professor & Director, Gerontology Academic Program, University of Nevada

Course Description: Most distress among persons living with dementia represents an expression of unmet need. Instead of treating ill-being through reactive pharmacological and/or non-pharmacological interventions, our primary goal should always be supporting well-being. Today, we will learn how to use the seven domains of well-being developed by the Murray Alzheimer Research and Education Program (Dupuis, Whyte, Carson et al. 2012) as a framework to assess and proactively support well-being. When necessary, this framework can also be used to decode and respond to expressions of stress and distress, thus reducing excess disability and unnecessary drug use.
